Malka is a warm, witty, and outgoing girl with many talents. She is very personable and comfortable with all types of people. Without exaggeration, people are drawn to her. Her fascination with life includes a love of travel, languages, writing, photography, neuropsychology, and a lot more! She has an excellent rapport with kids, and her chocolate chip cookies are famous in five states.

Malka began teaching while still in high school, and accepted a full-time teaching position after seminary. In 2009 JESNA awarded to Malka the Grinspoon-Steinhardt Award for Excellence in Jewish Education. With strong organizational and problem-solving skills and a great sense of fun, Malka has also worked extensively with university students, Young Professionals, and families.

Having lived in places as varied as Texas, Washington DC, and London as well as having traveled adventurously, Malka is comfortable and confident in many social circles and can carry a conversation on almost any topic. Items on her bucket list include writing a book, running a marathon, and changing the world.

Looking for...

Someone intelligent, kind, self-motivated, and responsible with a positive outlook on life and looking to build a chassidische home.
